In today's global economy, the need to gain access to business-critical information authored in languages other than English—contracts, patents, legal reviews, medical reports, financial information, web content, etc.—is steadily increasing. Into English translations involving intellectual property are a hot market today: IP attorneys, including patent applications, form an integral part of our business. Many of our customers are US-based firms with foreign offices whose native documentation is needed in English; others are headquartered outside the US and need to file native documents for the US market.

Into English translation differs from traditional Into Foreign translation of large scale documentation localization, software localization, and website localization projects. Because the information is often very time-critical—and largely for an internal corporate audience—this service is characterized by accurate, fast-paced translation work targeted “for information only” use. ENLASO's team of dedicated subject matter experts in strategic areas ensure that our customers' aggressive timeline requirements are met.

Certification and Notarization Services

Many documents translated from a foreign language into English require certification that the end product (the translated document) is a true and accurate translation of the source document. ENLASO certifies the accuracy of any translation and provides notarized certificates, at no extra cost.
